I, Hal Poret, I am over the age of 18 and am otherwise competent to make this declaration and expert report. All statements of fact are true, and all statements of opinion are believed to be true.

BACKGROUND AND PURPOSE

South Texas College of Law recently announced that it is changing its name to Houston College of Law. The University of Houston is concerned that the name Houston College of Law will create a likelihood of confusion – i.e., that it will cause people to mistakenly believe that the law school is part of or affiliated with the University of Houston. Counsel for University of Houston retained me to design and conduct a scientific survey to reliably determine the extent to which, if at all, such confusion is likely.¹

This declaration and report details the design, execution, and results of the survey. My work is ongoing and I may supplement this declaration and report if I obtain additional information or data. As discussed in detail below, the survey did find a significant likelihood of confusion.

In connection with designing my survey and preparing this declaration and report, I reviewed the following materials: (1) Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion for Interim Injunctive Relief; (2) Houston College of Law website; (3) University of Houston website.

The fee charged for the survey is $75,000. This includes the fees paid to the survey programming and sampling services and preparation of this declaration and report. Any additional work in connection with this matter will be charged at a rate of $525 per hour.

AUTHORSHIP AND QUALIFICATIONS

This study was designed, supervised, and implemented by me, Hal L. Poret, President at Hal Poret, LLC.

I have personally designed, supervised, and implemented approximately 1,000 surveys regarding the perceptions and opinions of consumers. Over 200 have involved consumer perception with respect to trademarks, and over 200 have been conducted online. I have personally designed numerous studies that have been admitted as evidence in legal proceedings and I have been accepted as an expert in survey research on numerous occasions by U.S. District Courts, the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board, the FTC, and the National Advertising Division of the Council of Better Business Bureaus (NAD).

I am a member of the American Association of Public Opinion Research, publisher of Public Opinion Quarterly and the Journal of Survey Statistics and Methodology, the Council of American Survey Research Organizations (CASRO), the International Trademark Association, and the National Advertising Division of the Council of Better Business Bureaus (NAD). I routinely conduct market research surveys for a variety of small to large corporations and organizations.

I have frequently spoken at major intellectual property and legal conferences on the topic of how to design and conduct surveys that meet legal evidentiary standards for reliability, including conferences held by the International Trademark Association (INTA), American Intellectual Property Law Association, Practising Law Institute, Managing Intellectual Property, Promotions Marketing Association, American Conference Institute, and various bar organizations.

In addition to my survey research experience, I hold bachelors and masters degrees in mathematics and a J.D. from Harvard Law School. Additionally, a true and accurate copy of my biographical material, including lists of testimony and publications, is provided in Appendix A.

STUDY DESIGN

A total of 992 respondents participated in this online likelihood of confusion survey among Texas residents, prospective students, and professionals.² In the case of most consumer products or services, the relevant universe for a likelihood of confusion survey is defined as prospective “purchasers” of the allegedly infringing products or services. In the case of educational institutions, the relevant “purchaser” is more difficult to define. Certainly prospective law school students and parents of prospective law students are prospective “purchasers” since they could encounter Houston College of Law in connection with decisions about what law school to attend.

Since law school graduates carry their law school degrees with them into their professions and their law schools are inherently part of their marketing of their own services (because schools attended are routinely included on resumes and bios), it is also logical in the case of educational institutions to survey those who would potentially hire or retain law school graduates. Such individuals are reasonably viewed as prospective “consumers” of the law school in the sense that they are purchasing the “product” produced by the law school (the graduate) and their impression of the law school attended might influence their decision as to whether to hire or retain the graduate. Such individuals would include:

² See the Sampling section of this report for more information regarding who qualified for and completed the survey.

- (1) Individuals who would be responsible for retaining an attorney if they or their family needed one;
- (2) Owners, managers, general counsel, or other company representatives who would have responsibility for retaining an attorney for business needs or disputes;
- (3) Human resources representatives who are responsible for recruiting, interviewing and/or hiring, and would therefore be involved in considering resumes of prospective job candidates.³

In addition, University of Houston is generally concerned about the public being exposed to publicity or information about Houston College of Law and potentially believing it is part of or affiliated with University of Houston. Specifically, University of Houston is concerned that it could potentially be harmed if its prospective students were influenced by perceptions about another educational institution that it is not affiliated with. Accordingly, I also included in the survey prospective college students and their parents, as they would be the core prospective “purchasers” of University of Houston services that could potentially have their decisions impacted by their perceptions of Houston College of Law if they were confused.

To summarize the above, the five segments covered in the survey were:

³ While law firms would also be part of this universe, as law firms hire law graduates, I did not include law firms in the survey because there has been so much publicity regarding the lawsuit in the legal community in Texas that I did not have confidence that the pool would be sufficiently untainted by publicity. In the case of the other segments of the universe surveyed, the concern about publicity about the name change or the lawsuit could be handled by asking questions about those topics at the end of the survey, as discussed below.

- (1) Law student group - prospective law students and parents of prospective law students
- (2) College student group - prospective college students and parents of prospective college students
- (3) Individual client group - consumers who would participate in decisions to retain an attorney if they or someone in their family needed one
- (4) Business client group - company executives and other professionals who have responsibility in retaining legal services for a company or business
- (5) Hiring group - human resources professionals who have responsibility for recruiting and hiring employees

The geographic scope of the survey was the state of Texas. Since Houston College of Law is located in Houston and I understand that its student body primarily comes from Texas, Texas is clearly the key geographical region to survey. While of course students from other states could attend Houston College of Law, surveying the state of Texas provides a fair and reliable result because Texas is the core of the market for the law school. In addition, residents of Texas would be the most sophisticated about the geography and local schools and would be the least likely to be confused, as opposed to residents from other states who would tend to be more likely to mistakenly assume another school with “Houston” in the name is affiliated with University of Houston, due to their lesser knowledge of the local area and schools. Accordingly, leaving residents of other states out of the survey would, if anything, underestimate the level of confusion by surveying only those who are the best equipped to understand two schools in the Houston area as being separate entities.

The Test Group involved exposing respondents to use of the Houston College of Law name in a manner that realistically reflects how it would be encountered in the actual marketplace. There were two main components of the survey to simulate two categories of ways in which the name would likely be encountered.

One component involved exposing respondents to the name Houston College of Law outside of any marketing or advertising materials from the Defendant. Individuals may encounter the name Houston College of Law on its own in various contexts, for instance: (1) on the resume or bio of an attorney who is being considered for retention; (2) on the resume or bio of an individual applying for a job; or (3) by hearing about Houston College of Law in the news or other publicity, or in conversation with another individual. Accordingly, it was appropriate to include a component testing exposure to the name Houston College of Law on its own in order to test for likelihood of confusion in the case of such realistic exposures.

The second component involved exposing respondents to the name Houston College of Law as it appears in actual marketing materials of Defendant. Individuals may encounter the name Houston College of Law in marketing materials in various contexts, for instance if a potential law student or parent of a law student is considering selection of a law school and seeks out information regarding the law school. For this component, I selected the Houston College of Law webpage as a representative stimulus for simulating exposure to the Houston College of Law name as it appears in marketing materials. The website is a common way that those seeking information on the law school would encounter the name Houston College of Law. Accordingly, it was appropriate to show respondents the Houston College of Law webpage in order to simulate a realistic consumer exposure to the name in the context of actual marketing materials.

For the website component of the survey, the Test Group was shown the current Houston College of Law website. However, in order to test for likelihood of confusion in a manner that can realistically be projected going forward, it was necessary to make one alteration to the current website. The current website contains a component with rotating images that, among other things: (1) prominently announces the name change; and (2) prominently announces that the law school is defending the name change in court. It is my assumption in designing the survey that these are temporary aspects of the website that appear now because the name change is recent and the controversy over the name change is ongoing, but that if the law school is allowed to use the name Houston College of Law, it will eventually stop advertising the name change and stop referring to the controversy on its website. In other words, it is my assumption that Houston College of Law's normal operating procedure going forward would not involve continuing to call such prominent attention to its name change or the fact that the name change was challenged in court. Since the purpose of the survey is to simulate whether confusion is likely under normal marketplace conditions going forward – i.e. , if the school is allowed to use the name Houston College going forward into the future – it was necessary and appropriate to remove the components of the current website that atypically call attention to the name change and legal controversy. Allowing these elements to be seen in the survey would prevent the survey from reliably measuring likelihood of confusion under typical, representative future operation of the law school under the name Houston College of Law. Rather, it would only test for likelihood of confusion under the temporary, aberrant conditions where the name change is recent and a controversy over the name is occurring. For similar reasons, the website was also shown with the www.hcl.edu web address rather than the www.stcl.edu web address, as it is my assumption that Houston College of Law intends to use the www.hcl.edu web address going forward.

For the Individual Client, Business Client, and Hiring Groups, roughly half of the respondents were assigned to a Name Group that was exposed to the Houston College of Law name on its own and the other half to a Webpage group that was exposed to the Houston College of Law website. The Law Student Group was only assigned to a Webpage Group and not a Name Group because those considering application to law school would be extremely likely to look at marketing materials for the law school, such as the website, and would be very unlikely to only hear of the name outside of actual marketing materials.

The College Student Group was only assigned to a Name Group and not a Webpage Group because those who are considering college would be very unlikely to be reviewing marketing materials for a law school. To the contrary, if such individuals hear about Houston College of Law it would far more likely be in the news or other publicity or in conversation and not from seeking out the law school website.

The following table summarizes all the survey Test Groups and shows the number of respondents who participated in each:

Test Groups	Number of Final Respondents
Name Test Groups	335
College student group	136
Individual client group	85
Business client group	47
Hiring group	67
Webpage Test Groups	303
Law student group	100
Individual client group	90
Business client group	48
Hiring group	65

The survey followed the well-accepted “Eveready” format. The key characteristic of an Eveready survey is that it shows respondents only the Defendant’s use of the allegedly infringing name, and never shows them the senior mark. Accordingly, the survey is non-suggestive and does nothing to call the senior user to mind. The respondent can only express confusion if the senior user (here, University of Houston) comes to mind without the survey ever mentioning it in the instructions, questions, or stimuli. This is a fair and conservative way to test for likelihood of confusion.

As indicated above, all those assigned to a Name Test Group were exposed to the following mark:

HOUSTON COLLEGE OF LAW

All those assigned to a Webpage Test Group were shown a webpage featuring the name at issue – i.e. HOUSTON COLLEGE OF LAW. One of the images of the webpage shown to the Webpage Test Group is shown here as an example:

As this was an online survey, all of the instructions and questions were displayed on respondents' computer screens and each question appeared on its own screen.

Name Test Group

335 Test Group respondents participated in the Name Test Group. First, upon completion of the screening questions, respondents were instructed according to which sub-group they had been assigned based on which screening criteria they met.

Respondents who qualified as potential college students or parents of potential college students who may be exposed to the name of a law school from the general news or publicity were prompted as follows:

For this survey, we would like you to imagine that you hear mention of a law school, either in the news, in other publicity, or from someone you know.

Meanwhile, respondents who qualified as a consumer who would participate in decisions to retain a family attorney and who may be exposed to the name of a law school in connection with hiring such an attorney were prompted as follows:

For this survey, we would like you to imagine that you or someone in your family needed legal services, and that you were considering hiring an attorney who attended a certain law school.

Meanwhile, respondents who qualified as a professional who has responsibility in retaining legal services for a company or business and who may be exposed to the name of a law school in connection with hiring such an attorney for corporate reasons were prompted as follows:

For this survey, we would like you to imagine that your company or business needed legal services, and that you were considering hiring an attorney who attended a certain law school.

Respondents who qualified for the survey as a professional who has responsibility in hiring/recruiting employees and who may be exposed to the name of a school in connection with their professional role were prompted as follows:

For this survey, we would like you to imagine that in connection with your role in recruiting, interviewing or hiring employees, you review resumes and come across various educational institutions that job candidates have attended.

All respondents were then prompted:

On the next screen, we are going to show you the name of the law school. Please look at it so we can ask you some questions about it.

On the next screen, respondents were shown the following name:

HOUSTON COLLEGE OF LAW

After a minimum of five seconds had passed, then respondents were able to continue to the next screen where they were given the following instruction:

On the next screens we will ask you some questions about the law school we just showed you. If for any question we ask you, you do not know or have no opinion, please indicate so. Please do not guess.

Respondents were then asked the key question for the survey. While a typical Eveready survey asks respondents multiple questions covering different forms of confusion, such as who a product or service is put out by, who it is affiliated with, or who it is sponsored or approved by, my survey included only one confusion question. This question addressed respondents' opinion about whether or that the law school is part of or affiliated with any other college or university. This concept of affiliation is asked about in the typical Eveready survey. The only way in which my survey differed from the typical Eveready survey is that it asked less questions and, therefore, gave respondents fewer opportunities to express confusion.

The question respondents were asked is shown here:

Do you think the law school that we just showed you...⁴

- is part of or affiliated with any college or university
- is not part of or affiliated with any college or university
- Don't know/No opinion

This question was fair and balanced in numerous respects:

- This question was a “filter” question in that it asked respondents whether or not they believed the law school is part of or affiliated with any institution prior to asking them to name any institution. Starting with such a filter question avoids any suggestion that there is any affiliation, and does not give respondents any option to name another institution until the respondent has answered that they do believe there is a connection to another institution.

⁴ To avoid response bias due to response option order, the order in which the first two response options appeared was randomized for each respondent.

- The answer choices were rotated so the affirmative and negative response options were presented neutrally and the results could not be skewed toward an affirmative answer.
- Respondents were both instructed that they should not guess and could answer that they “don’t know” or had “no opinion” if they don’t have an answer, and they were given an explicit response option to select “don’t know/no opinion.” This ensured respondents were easily able to give such an answer and were not induced to speculate.
- The question used the term “college or university” so as to be balanced and not suggest a connection to a “university” specifically.

Respondents who answered that they think the law school is part of or affiliated with any college or university were then asked:

What college or university do you think the law school that we just showed you is part of or affiliated with?

Please identify the college or university as specifically as you are able.

If you are thinking of more than one college or university, please enter each one in a separate box below. If you don’t know, you may select that option.

Respondents could type in up to five different answers or they could select “Don’t know.”

Respondents who typed in an answer were then asked:

What makes you think that the law school we showed you is part of or affiliated with [the answer entered in response to the previous question was inserted into the question text here]?

Respondents could type in any answer, or select “Don’t know.”

If the respondent previously entered more than one name, then this question was then repeated for each previous answer entered by the respondent.

This then concluded the survey for all Test Group respondents who participated in the Name Test.

Webpage Test Group

303 Test Group respondents participated in the Webpage Test. First, upon completion of the screening questions, respondents were prompted according to which sub-group they had been assigned based on which screening criteria they met.

Respondents who qualified as potential law school students or parents of potential law school students who may be exposed to the name of a law school as a school they may consider were prompted as follows:

For this survey, we would like you to imagine that you are considering attending law school.⁵

Meanwhile, respondents who qualified as a consumer who has or would have involvement in hiring a family attorney and who may be exposed to the name of a law school in connection with hiring such an attorney were prompted as follows:

⁵ If the respondent was a parent of a potential law school student then they were instead prompted with, “For this survey, we would like you to imagine that a child of yours is considering attending law school.”

For this survey, we would like you to imagine that you or someone in your family needed legal services, and that you were considering hiring an attorney who attended a certain law school.

Meanwhile, respondents who qualified as a professional who has or would have involvement in hiring an attorney for their business and who may be exposed to the name of a law school in connection with hiring such an attorney for corporate reasons were prompted as follows:

For this survey, we would like you to imagine that your company or business needed legal services, and that you were considering hiring an attorney who attended a certain law school.

Respondents who qualified for the survey as a professional who has or would have involvement in recruiting or hiring employees and who may be exposed to the name of a school in connection with their professional role were prompted as follows:

For this survey, we would like you to imagine that in connection with your role in recruiting, interviewing or hiring employees, you review resumes and come across various educational institutions that job candidates have attended.

All respondents in the Webpage Test Group were then prompted:

On the next screen, we are going to show you an image of a web page for a law school. So that you have enough time to review the page, you will not be able to advance to the next screen for approximately 30 – 40 seconds. You may take as much time as you like to review the page so we can ask you some questions about it.

On the next screen, respondents were shown a webpage for HOUSTON COLLEGE OF LAW. The webpage was programmed in such a way that it was comprised of eight images that rotated every five seconds. To respondents this was seamless so that the images ultimately appeared to be one webpage with a rotating banner. The following eight images were seamlessly randomized for respondents so that they appeared as one cohesive webpage:⁶

⁶ The webpage images appeared large across respondents' screens, as a webpage would typically appear. The images shown here have been reduced in size in order to fit into this report. True and correct copies of the screenshots showing how the webpage appeared to respondents in the survey are provided in Appendix C. True and correct copies of the actual images used to program the survey are provided in Appendix E of this report.

The images continued to rotate for as long as respondents stayed on the screen. Once all eight images had been displayed for respondents at least once, then the following instruction appeared on screen beneath the webpage:

Before moving on with the survey, please confirm if you were able to view the webpage clearly.

- I was able to view the web page clearly
- I am unable to view the web page clearly

Respondents confirmed they were able to view the webpage clearly before continuing with the survey.

The remaining survey for the Webpage Test Group respondents (including the questions) was identical to that of the survey taken by respondents in the Name Test Group.

Control Groups

The survey also included a Control Group, whose function is to measure the survey “noise” level or “false positive” level – i.e., the tendency of survey respondents to name the University of Houston for reasons that may or may not be fairly attributed to the confusing similarity of the name “Houston College of Law,” such as respondents having pre-existing beliefs, guessing, or other forms of respondent or survey error.⁷ The Control Group alters the allegedly infringing name in order to measure the extent to which respondents will nevertheless connect the law school to University of Houston even when a law school name that is not confusingly similar. This allows us to appropriately discount the Test Group rate to deduct this “noise” or “false positive” or placebo rate and arrive at a “net” confusion level that can be reliably attributed to the similarity of the name.

⁷ A Control Group in a survey is akin to a placebo group in a classic scientific experiment. When a Test Group is given a medication and questioned about its impact, a Control or Placebo Group is given a placebo and asked the same questions to assess the extent to which the same result ensues. A placebo is a pill that removes the active ingredient at issue but changes nothing else. If, for example, 30% of the Test Group responds that the medication helped their headache, the Control Group must be consulted to determine the extent to which, if at all, this result can be reliably attributed to the effectiveness of the active ingredient. If 25% to 30% of the Control Group reports that the medication (placebo) helped their headache, we know that the 30% Test Group result cannot be attributed to the effectiveness of the test medication, as those given the placebo had a very similar result. If, on the other hand, only 10% of the Control Group reports a benefit, we know that the 20% difference between the Test result (30%) and the Control result (10%) must reflect the genuine impact of the Test medication. The same experimental design (comparing Test and Control Groups) is commonly used in surveys to isolate the impact of the “active ingredient” (in this case, the name “Houston College of Law” and weed out the impact of any other factors.

It is my understanding that Defendant alleges that University of Houston cannot own the exclusive right to use the city name Houston as part of its name. Defendant further alleges that it adopted its new name in order to clarify confusion and effectively communicate the location of the law school in Houston. For the purposes of designing the survey control, I assumed the validity of Defendant's contentions and designed a control that assumes Defendant is permitted to use the city name Houston in its name in a non-confusing fashion to identify its location accurately. To accomplish this, I used the control name "South Texas College of Law - Houston." This control allows the law school name to effectively communicate its location using the city name Houston. This is a fair and realistic control, as many school names use a format that add a city name at the end of the college or university name to clarify the specific city location. Indeed, this control name would have been a sensible one to accomplish Defendant's goal behind its name change, as it continues to accurately identify the law school by the name it has used for years while clarifying the location.

Including the name "Houston" in the control name means that the survey precisely controlled for any general tendency to associate any mention of "Houston" with the University of Houston because it is a prominent Houston-based educational institution. In other words, the control measures the tendency of respondents to think of and name University of Houston when seeing the term "Houston" even in a non-confusingly similar name. This allows us to compare the results for the name Houston College of Law to the results for a name that uses "Houston" in a concededly non-confusing manner. Subtracting the Control Group results weeds out any general tendency to associate "Houston" with University of Houston in the education context and yields a net result that is specifically attributable to the confusing similarity of the name Houston College of Law, and cannot be dismissed as a general tendency to name University of Houston when asked about a school that is in Houston.

The Control precisely conformed with the standard for creating an ideal control, as articulated in the Reference Guide on Survey Research: “In designing a control group study, the expert should select a stimulus for the control group that shares as many characteristics with the control group as possible, with the key exception of the characteristic whose influence is being assessed.”⁸ In the case of survey groups that just saw the name on its own, the control name accomplished this by holding constant the use of the term “Houston” (which defendant alleges is a common term that both parties have the right to use) but altering the use of Houston so as to be clearly non-confusing. In the case of the groups that saw the webpage, the Control held constant every aspect of the website that was shown to the Test Group, with the sole exception of changing the name. All other images, information, and other aspects of the website were kept the same. Accordingly, the control measures the tendency of respondents to connect the parties for all reasons other than the challenged name, such as any pre-existing beliefs, perceived similarity of services, the common location of both parties (Houston), guessing, or any other factors. Since the only difference between the Test and Control website is the alteration of the name, the net confusion level measured by subtracting the Control Group result from the Test Group result must be attributed specifically to the similarity of the name. Other attributes of the parties that are similar cannot be the cause of the net confusion rate, as those similarities occurred in both the Test and Control Group and, therefore, have already been accounted for when the Control Group result is subtracted.

⁸ 7 Shari S. Diamond, Reference Guide on Survey Research, Reference Manual on Scientific Evidence (Second edition, 2000), 229, at 258.

It is also important to note that the Control was very conservative in that it did not alter the colors of the Houston College of Law website or any other elements alleged to contribute to confusion besides the name. Since the same colors and other non-name elements appeared in both the Test and Control website, any confusion due to these factors is screened out and does not get counted in the net confusion level. This makes the net confusion level a conservative estimate of confusion that is attributable purely to the name Houston College of Law and that does not count any additional confusion caused by any other allegedly similar elements, such as colors.

The survey included corresponding Control Groups for each Test Group.

- 172 respondents participate in a Control Name Group
- 182 respondents participate in a Control Webpage Group

Control Group respondents took a survey identical to that of their Test Group counterparts with the sole exception that they were shown a Control name instead of the name at issue – HOUSTON COLLEGE OF LAW.

Respondents in the Control Name Group saw the following Control name:

SOUTH TEXAS COLLEGE OF LAW - HOUSTON

Meanwhile, respondents in the Control Webpage Group were shown a Control webpage composed of the following eight Control images in which the name HOUSTON COLLEGE OF LAW was removed and replaced with the Control name, SOUTH TEXAS COLLEGE OF LAW – HOUSTON:

This concluded the survey for the Control Group respondents.

True and correct screenshots of the survey are provided in Appendix C.

SUMMARY OF KEY FINDINGS

This section details certain key survey findings. The survey results are discussed further in the Detailed Findings section below.

Across all Test Groups, 24.9% of respondents mistakenly believed that the Houston College of Law is part of or affiliated with University of Houston.

Across all Control Groups, 6.5% of respondents answered that the South Texas College of Law-Houston is part of or affiliated with University of Houston.

Subtracting the 6.5% noise level from the gross 24.9% confusion rate yields a net confusion rate of 18.4%. Based on the net confusion rate of 18.4% and the other data discussed below, it is my opinion that there is a significant likelihood of confusion with respect to University of Houston created by the change to the name Houston College of Law.

See Detailed Findings section below for additional information on results. True and correct copies of the full data are provided in its original electronic form in Appendix D.

METHODOLOGY

THE RELEVANT UNIVERSE OF INTEREST

The appropriate sample universe for this survey consisted of Texas consumers and professionals who might encounter the name of a law school under a variety of different scenarios. The following groups of consumers and professionals were identified as the relevant sample universe:

- Potential college students and parents of potential college students
- Potential law school students and parents of potential law school students
- Consumers who would participate in decisions to retain a family attorney
- Professionals who have responsibility in retaining legal services for a company or business
- Professionals who have responsibility in hiring/recruiting employees

The following screening questions were employed to ensure the final survey sample was comprised of respondents from each of these groups.

First, after initial demographic questions, all potential respondents were asked:

Which of the following best summarizes your occupational status?

Please select one answer

Respondents could select as many as applied to them from the following list:

- Full-time employed
- Part-time employed
- Business owner/self-employed

- Independent contractor/free-lance
- Unemployed
- Student (currently attending)
- Student (will be attending after summer)
- Retired
- Other

Next, all respondents were asked:

In what state do you primarily reside?

Next, respondents who previously indicated they are a student, were asked:

In what state do you attend school (or will you be attending school when school is in session)?

Only respondents who indicated that they either reside in Texas or that they are a student who attends school in Texas were able to continue.

Next, respondents who previously indicated that they are a student, were asked:

Which of the following is your current status as a student?

Please select one answer.

- Currently in high school
- Graduated high school; starting college
- Currently in college
- Graduated college; starting graduate/professional school
- Currently in graduate/professional school
- Other

Students who answered that they are currently in high school were then asked:

Are you currently planning on attending college after graduation from high school?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know/not sure

Students who answered, yes, to this question were considered part of the relevant sample universe as a potential college student.

These respondents were then also asked:

Are you likely to consider attending any graduate or professional school?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know/not sure

Students who answered, yes, were then asked:

Which of the following graduate or professional schools, if any, would you consider attending?

Please select all that apply or none

Respondents could select as many as applied to them from the following randomized list, or "None of the above," or "I don't know/not sure":

- Law school
- Medical school
- Business school
- Education school

Students who selected “Law school” in response to this question were then considered part of the relevant sample universe as potential law school student.

Meanwhile, respondents who were born between 1945 and 1982 (and therefore the appropriate age to be a parent of a college-age child were asked:

Are you the parent of any student that is....

Please select all that apply or none.

- Currently in high school
- Graduated high school; starting college
- Currently in college
- Graduated college; starting graduate/professional school
- Currently in graduate/professional school
- No, none of these

Parents of a high school student were then asked:

Is any child of yours who is in high school currently planning on attending college after graduation from high school?

- Yes
- No
- Don’t know/not sure

Respondents who answered, yes, to this question were considered part of the relevant sample universe as a parent of a potential college student.

These respondents, along with parents who previously answered that they have a child who is either starting college or currently in college, were then also asked:

Is any child of yours who is attending or will be attending college likely to consider attending any graduate or professional school?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know/not sure

Respondents who answered, yes, to this question were then asked:

Which of the following graduate or professional schools, if any, would any child of yours be likely to consider attending?

Respondents could select as many as applied to them from the following randomized list, or "None of the above," or "I don't know/not sure":

- Law school
- Medical school
- Business school
- Education school

Respondents who selected "law school" were considered part of the relevant sample universe as a parent of a potential law school student.

Next, all respondents who previously answered that they are employed full-time or are a business owner/self-employed, were asked:

As part of your occupation or employment, which of the following areas, if any, do you have responsibility for?

Please select all that apply or none.

Respondents could select as many as applied to them from the following randomized list, or "None of the above":

- Recruiting, interviewing and/or hiring of employees
- Selecting or retaining attorneys/law firms to provide legal services for your company or business
- Information technology or website development/maintenance
- Customer service
- Sales
- Advertising or marketing

Respondents who selected “recruiting, interviewing and/or hiring of employees” were considered part of the relevant sample universe as a professional who has responsibility in hiring/recruiting employees.

Respondents who answered “selecting or retaining attorneys/law firms to provide legal services for your company or business” were considered part of the relevant sample universe as a professional who has responsibility in retaining legal services for a company or business.

For classification purposes, professional respondents were also asked:

What is your position or job title?

Next, respondents who indicated earlier in the demographic questions that they are age 25 or older, were asked:

If you or someone in your family needed an attorney for any type of legal services, would you personally participate in the decision about which attorney to retain?

- Yes
- No
- Don’t know/not sure

Respondents who selected “yes” were considered part of the relevant sample universe as a consumer who would participate in decisions to retain a family attorney.

In summary, respondents could qualify for the main survey if they met at least one of the following five sets of criteria for the relevant sample universe:

- Potential college students and parents of potential college students
- Potential law school students and parents of potential law school students
- Consumers who would participate in decisions to retain a family attorney
- Professionals who have responsibility in retaining legal services for a company or business
- Professionals who have responsibility in hiring/recruiting employees

This concluded the screening questions for all respondents.

To account for the possibility that respondents may have already had their perceptions tainted by publicity about the name change or the lawsuit, the survey asked questions at the end of the survey to find out whether this has occurred. Respondents who have heard news about the name change or legal controversy can therefore be identified and could be excluded from the analysis of the data if desired. Upon completion of the main survey, the following two questions were asked for classification purposes only. First:

In the past few months, have you seen or heard any news, publicity, or other discussion about South Texas College of Law changing its name to Houston College of Law?

The following table displays the proportion of final respondents who selected each answer:

Have Heard News Publicity or Other about Name Change
N=992	N	%
Yes, I have	98	9.9%
No, I have not	868	87.5%
Don't know/No opinion	26	2.6%

Respondents who answered, yes, were then asked:

What have you seen or heard about South Texas College of Law changing its name to Houston College of Law?

Please be as specific and detailed as possible.

Respondents could type in any answer.

The same respondents were then also asked:

Have you seen or heard anything about a lawsuit or other controversy relating to South Texas College of Law changing its name to Houston College of Law?

The following table displays the proportion of final respondents who selected each answer:

Seen or Heard Anything about A Lawsuit of Other Controversy
N=992	N	%
Yes, I have	43	4.3%
No, I have not	50	5.0%
Don't know/No opinion	5	0.5%

Finally, all respondents were asked:

Do you or does anyone in your household work for any of the following?

Please select all that apply.

The following table displays the list of randomized options shown to respondent and the proportion of final respondents who selected each:

Related Occupation
N=992	N	%
An advertising firm	6	0.6%
A market research firm	5	0.5%
A law firm	53	5.3%
An academic institution	76	7.7%
No, none of these	859	86.6%

The purpose in asking these questions at the end of the survey as opposed to during the initial screening questions was to avoid biasing survey results by pre-exposing respondents to the concept of publicity over a name change or any potential legal dispute.

True and correct copies of the actual wording of the screening questions used are shown in Appendix B.

SAMPLING PLAN

The sampling plan involved a random selection of consumers and professionals who are part of an online panel.

Online surveys are well-accepted in the field of survey research as a standard, reliable methodology. Indeed, online surveys are now the most common method of conducting market research among consumers. Businesses and other organizations routinely make decisions of importance based on the results of online survey research among consumers, and online surveys have been accepted in evidence in numerous U.S. District Court cases. I have personally designed and executed numerous internet surveys that have been accepted by courts.

The sample of panelists used in the survey was provided by Research Now and SSI, both leading suppliers of online sample for surveys. I have worked with Research Now and SSI on many surveys and have found the procedures and panels of each to be highly reliable.

Research Now

Research Now has a large and diverse panel consisting of millions of Americans and is highly regarded as a reputable source of respondents for online surveys within the field of market research. Research Now utilizes appropriate industry procedures for ensuring the integrity and quality of its panels. Research Now employs a “by-invitation-only” panel recruitment model to enroll pre-validated individuals and, therefore, maintains a panel comprised of the most credible survey takers who are less prone to self-selection bias. Quality and integrity of its research panel is also obtained and maintained in the following ways.

- It requires a double opt-in and agreement to provide truthful and well-considered answers to online market research surveys. First, potential panelists opt-in during the enrollment process, and then they are sent a follow-up email confirmation that requests the potential panelist to click a link to validate the opt-in. Then, he or she is sent a follow-up email providing access to their member account and they can begin receiving surveys.
- A unique email address is required to opt-in to the panel and physical addresses provided by panelists in the US are verified against government postal information.
- Research Now implements data quality measures by focusing on identifying and pursuing panelists who exhibit suspicious behaviors. This is done by identifying members through routine review of behaviors and sometimes with the help of its clients, and then evaluating a wider set of behaviors, particularly members profile information and survey performance.

- Research Now also employs a “Three Strikes Policy” in which panelists who commit survey offenses, such as speeding, inattentiveness, poor quality open ends, answering inconsistencies, and selecting dummy answers, are flagged with an “offense” code. Panelists who are flagged three times for such offenses are disqualified from panel membership and future surveys.

SSI

SSI has a large and diverse panel consisting of millions of Americans and is highly regarded as a reputable source of respondents for online surveys within the field of market research. SSI utilizes appropriate industry procedures for ensuring the integrity and quality of its panels. Quality and authentication of their panelists are maintained on an ongoing basis through such procedures as digital fingerprinting and matching against third-party databases, among others.

SSI also ensures data integrity through their continued review of their panelists’ behavior on their own and through the assistance of their clients, by employing the following tactics to flag panelists who compromise the quality of their panels:

- Timestamps to flag respondents who take surveys too quickly, indicating they are not paying sufficient attention
- Identifying those who consistently tick items straight down or across grid-format questions, indicating a respondent is clicking without actually considering each item
- Quality control questions to identify panelists’ inattention
- Real-time database analyses to stop fraudulent respondents

The following table displays the final proportion of each type of respondent who qualified for each Group:

Final Number of Respondents in Each Test Group
	Name Test Group (N=335)	Webpage Test Group (N=303)	Test Group Total (N=638)
	N	N	N
College student group	136	NA	136
Law student group	NA	100	100
Individual client group	85	90	175
Business client group	47	48	95
Hiring group	67	65	132

Final Number of Respondents in Each Control Group
	Name Control Group (N=172)	Webpage Control Group (N=182)	Control Group Total (N=354)
	N	N	N

Hiring group	34	33	67

DATA PROCESSING

Data was collected by Focus Vision, a company specializing in web survey programming and data collection and processing, and made available to Hal Poret, LLC through an electronic portal on an ongoing basis. The data set showing each respondent's answers to all questions will be provided in electronic form.

INTERVIEWING PROCEDURES

The online survey was programmed and hosted by Focus Vision. My staff and I thoroughly tested the programmed survey prior to any potential respondents receiving the invitation to participate in the survey.

DOUBLE-BLIND INTERVIEWING

It is important to point out that the study was administered under "double-blind" conditions. That is, not only were the respondents kept uninformed as to the purpose and sponsorship of the study, but the services involved in providing the sample and administering the online interviews (Focus Vision and Research Now) were similarly "blind" with respect to the study's purpose and sponsorship.

INTERVIEWING PERIOD

Interviewing was conducted from July 13, 2016 through July 22, 2016.

QUALITY CONTROL

Several measures were implemented in order to ensure a high level of quality control and validation with respect to respondents taking the survey.

Upon initially entering the survey, all respondents were required to pass a test to decipher that each respondent is a live person. The test employed in this survey is a CAPTCHA⁹ program that generates a task that humans can pass but current computer programs cannot. CAPTCHA is a well-known and widely-used tool in online survey research.

Upon successfully passing the CAPTCHA test, respondents were then asked to enter their year of birth and then their gender. This information was checked against the sample provider's (Research Now's) demographics on record for each respondent and any respondent providing an incorrect or inconsistent year of birth and/or gender was unable to continue to the main survey.

Toward the end of the screening questions, respondents were also asked to select their age range. Respondents who selected an age range that was inconsistent with their year of birth previously entered, were unable to continue with the survey.

These combined steps ensured that the survey was being taken by an actual live person and that each person was paying a certain level of attention to the survey questions and taking a certain level of care in entering responses.

The following question was also asked which permitted additional screening out of respondents who were paying insufficient attention or clicking responses indiscriminately:

People vary in the amount of attention they pay to surveys.

For quality assurance, please type the word "Yes" in the blank next to the "Other" box below and then click to continue.

- Strongly agree
- Agree
- Neutral
- Disagree
- Strongly disagree
- Other _____

Respondents who selected “other” and typed a response in the blank continued with the survey. A review was conducted of all the open-ended answers typed into the blank in order to verify that respondents had indeed typed in “yes,” as instructed.

Respondents were then also asked to carefully read these instructions:

- Please take the survey in one session without interruption.
- While taking the survey, please do not consult any other websites or other electronic or written materials.
- Please answer all questions on your own without consulting any other person.
- If you normally wear glasses or contact lenses when viewing a computer screen, please put them on.

Two options were provided in response to these instructions: 1) I understand and agree to the above instructions, and 2) I do not understand or do not agree to the above instructions. Only respondents who understood and agreed to the instructions were able to continue on to the main section of the survey.

Additionally, the survey program was set up in such a way as to restrict respondents from taking the survey via mobile devices. This contributed to ensuring respondents could easily and clearly view the images displayed in the survey as well as each question and corresponding response options.

Finally, a review of all open-ended responses was conducted in order to identify any respondents who may have entered non-responsive or nonsense comments or not given serious thought to the survey questions. As is standard procedure, respondents who gave non-responsive or nonsense comments were removed for not providing thoughtful and serious responses.¹⁰

¹⁰ Eight such respondents were removed from the survey.

DETAILED FINDINGS

The following tables display the proportion of respondents who manually identified University of Houston, or Houston U as a college or university that Houston College of Law is part of or affiliated with. Responses were counted as confused if they explicitly answered University of Houston or some obvious alternative, such as U of Houston. Answers were not counted as confused if they referred to Houston “College”, as such answers may have simply been repeating the term shown in the survey (Houston College of Law). Answers indicating that Houston College of Law is part of “Houston” or “Houston University” were also counted as confused (subject however to being weeded out by comparable answers in the Control Group) because they are likely references to University of Houston. University of Houston is commonly referred to as “Houston” in a variety of contexts, such as for sports (“Houston” or “Houston Cougars”) or even discussions of law schools.¹¹ While it is admittedly to some degree uncertain whether a Test Group answer of “Houston” refers to University of Houston, this is accounted for by comparably counting answers referring to “Houston” or “Houston University” in the Control Group as noise. By doing so, the Control Group weeds out any tendency to answer “Houston” or “Houston University” for any reasons that cannot be reliably attributed to confusion with University of Houston. In counting answers referring to Houston or Houston University equally in the Test and Control Group, therefore, the survey scientifically controls for the meaning of these answers and only counts them in the net confusion rate to the extent that they can be reliably assessed to be instances of confusion.

¹¹ For examples of uses of “Houston” to refer to University of Houston, see: http://espn.go.com/college-football/team/_/id/248/houston-cougars; <http://www.si.com/college-football/team/houston-cougars>; <http://www.sbnation.com/college-football/2016/7/20/12232064/big-12-conference-realignment-candidates-byu-cincinnati-uconn-houston-ucf>; <http://houston.lawschoolnumbers.com/>

I. Results Among All Respondents

The following table shows the result across all survey groups:

All Respondents
	All Test Groups (N=638)		All Control Groups (N=354)		Net Difference
	N	%	N	%	%
“University of Houston” or “U of Houston”	138	21.6%	16	4.5%	17.1%
“Houston” or “Houston U”	21	3.3%	7	2.0%	1.3%
Total	159	24.9%	23	6.5%	18.4%

As this table shows, 24.9% of Test Group respondents who were exposed to the name Houston College of Law either on its own or on the Houston College of Law website believed that Houston College of Law is part of or affiliated with University of Houston. In the Control Group, 6.5% answered that South Texas College of Law-Houston is part of or affiliated with University of Houston. This yields a net confusion rate of 18.4%.

It is important to observe that this 18.4% confusion rate is a net rate, which has already been aggressively discounted to weed out the impact of any survey noise. The gross test group level of confusion was 24.9%. Subtracting the Control Group rate to arrive at the 18.4% net confusion rate accounts for any issues of survey or respondent error and produces a result that is completely reliable and not subject to further uncertainty or discounting. For this reason, the 18.4% net confusion rate is reliable, scientific proof of significant confusion (as opposed to an uncontrolled gross Test Group rate of 24.9%, which would be subject to some level of uncertainty without a control to determine the extent to which it should be discounted).

It is also worth noting that a number of respondents who viewed the Houston College of Law website or the Control South Texas College of Law – Houston and answered that the law school is part of or affiliated with University of Houston referred to the colors or other elements of the website in explaining why. For instance, the following are answers given by respondents as to why they believed the law school is part of or affiliated with University of Houston:

ID #	Reason for Answering Law School is Part of or Affiliated with University of Houston
577	Colors, and wording
598	University of Houston logo is appearing in the screen.
615	The colors were red (same as U of H colors), the school was based in Houston, etc. I assumed it could be a graduate program offered by UH?
640	Large Font on Houston, Red - school color
1287	Houston in the Name and the logo colors
1384	Same colors, logo, and name
1832	Red colors, name of school
2160	It uses the name Houston, and has the same school colors - red and white - in the logo
2183	Logo

As noted before, since the control keeps all of these elements constant, it is screening out any confusion caused by similarity if color or other non-name elements. This is a further indication that the net confusion level is conservative, in that there are indications in the verbatim answers that the colors do exacerbate the tendency to connect Houston College of Law to University of Houston, and yet any such confusion is not counted in the 18.4% net confusion level.

II. Name Test and Control Group Results

Name Groups: Test vs. Control
	Name Test Group (N=335)		Name Control Group (N=172)		Net Difference
	N	%	N	%	%
"University of Houston" or "U of Houston"	68	20.3%	6	3.5%	16.8%
"Houston" or "Houston U"	9	2.7%	3	1.7%	1.0%
Total	77	23.0%	9	5.2%	17.8%

As the above table shows, the net confusion rate among respondents who only saw the Houston College of Law name or the Control name on its own was 17.8%.

III. Webpage Test and Control Group Results

Webpage Groups: Test vs. Control
	Webpage Test Group (N=303)		Webpage Control Group (N=182)		Net Difference
	N	%	N	%	%
"University of Houston" or "U of Houston"	70	23.1%	10	5.5%	17.6%
"Houston" or "Houston U"	12	4.0%	4	2.2%	1.8%
Total	82	27.1%	14	7.7%	19.4%

As the above table shows, the net confusion rate among respondents who saw the Houston College of Law name or the Control name on the Houston College of Law website was 19.4%.

IV. Results by Students/Parents of Students

Students/Parents of Students Who Named University of Houston
	Test Group (N=236)		Control Group (N=117)		Net Difference
Law students/Parents of Law students	N=100	%	N=60	%	%
"University of Houston" or "U of Houston"	19	19.0%	2	3.3%	15.7%
"Houston" or "Houston U"	3	3.0%	1	1.7%	1.3%
Total Law Student	22	22.0%	3	5.0%	17.0%
College students/Parents of College students	N=136	%	N=57	%	%
"University of Houston" or "U of Houston"	32	23.5%	3	5.3%	18.2%
"Houston" or "Houston U"	3	2.2%	1	1.8%	0.4%
Total College Student	35	25.7%	4	7.0%	18.7%
Total Both	57	24.1%	7	6.0%	18.1%

As the above table shows, the net confusion rate for the Law Student Group was 17.0% and the net confusion rate for the College Student Group is 18.7% and the total rate across both groups is 18.1%.

V. Results by Hiring/Retention Respondents

Hiring/Retention Respondents Who Named University of Houston
	Test Group (N=402)		Control Group (N=237)		Net Difference
Involved in retaining family attorney	N=175	%	N=116	%	%
“University of Houston” or “U of Houston”	41	23.4%	4	3.4%	20.0%
“Houston” or “Houston U”	8	4.6%	1	0.9%	3.7%
Total Individual Client	49	28.0%	5	4.3%	23.7%
Professional responsible for retaining attorney	N=95	%	N=54	%	%
“University of Houston” or “U of Houston”	23	24.2%	4	7.4%	16.8%
“Houston” or “Houston U”	3	3.2%	2	3.7%	(0.5%)
Total Business Client	26	27.4%	6	11.1%	16.3%
Professional with hiring responsibility	N=132	%	N=67	%	%
“University of Houston” or “U of Houston”	23	17.4%	3	4.5%	12.9%
“Houston” or “Houston U”	4	3.0%	2	3.0%	0.0%
Total Hiring	27	20.5%	5	7.5%	13.0%
Total All 3 Groups	102	25.4%	16	6.8%	18.6%

As the above table shows, the net confusion rate for the Individual Client Group was 23.7% and the net confusion rate for the Business Client Group is 16.3% and the net confusion rate for the Hiring Group is 13.0% and the total rate across all 3 groups is 18.6%.

VI. Results by Reduced Base

The following tables display the results if respondents who had previously heard of the school's name change or had previously heard about the controversy or lawsuit were removed from the final data.

Excludes Respondents Who Have Heard of the Name Change Prior to Survey
	All Test Groups (N=575)		All Control Groups (N=319)		Net Difference
	N	%	N	%	%
"University of Houston" or "U of Houston"	130	22.6%	11	3.4%	19.2%
"Houston" or "Houston U"	17	3.0%	7	2.2%	0.8%
Total	147	25.6%	18	5.6%	20.0%

Excluded Respondents Who Have Heard of Controversy/Lawsuit Prior to Survey
	All Test Groups (N=613)		All Control Groups (N=336)		Net Difference
	N	%	N	%	%
"University of Houston" or "U of Houston"	135	22.0%	14	4.2%	17.8%
"Houston" or "Houston U"	21	3.4%	7	2.1%	1.3%
Total	156	25.4%	21	6.3%	19.1%

As these tables show, removing the respondents who have heard publicity about the name change and/or the controversy over the change raises the net confusion rate.

VII. Conclusion

Based on the overall net confusion rate of 18.4% and the net confusion rates amongst the various subgroups, which were mostly in a similar range, it is my opinion that there is a significant likelihood of confusion with respect to University of Houston created by the change to the name Houston College of Law.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

Executed on July 27, 2016.
